GNFAC,

I was at Bacon Rind today, we didn't observe any cracking/collapsing but we were on a skin track most of the time. Good sized settlement cones around trees. This was the first day where I didn't sink to the ground when stepping out of my skis up high (Boot Pen 30cm), down low this is still the case. The light was a bit flat but I saw some fresh looking crowns in the lookers right trees of Ernest Miller Ridge mid slope where it is a bit steeper. I attached 2 photos but you really have to squint to see the crowns.

Thanks!
