Activity

Skiing

I skied a half lap into Bear Basin this morning, conditions have changed dramatically since I went up there with Dave! A few inches of new snow covered the old tracks and skiing was very good. From pole probes the height of snow on the East side was 70-80cm. It was supportable skiing, it appears that snow from the last week makes up most of the snowpack. No obvious signs of instability, the wind picked up around 11 and was moving snow along the ridgeline.

Psyched on snow!
